

WHO AM I?

I'm Brandon David Meza Vargas, a 20-year-old guy who is studying computer systems engineering cursing the sixth semester.

I'm someone with true passion for technology and I enjoy learning new things day by day. People say that I'm a lovely person and I think I'm, I also consider myself as a smart, focused and a responsible person.

I enjoy going out with my girlfriend, web development and everything it involves. I started doing exercise during the recent pandemic and I discovered that I like as much as videogames which I used to play very often with friends and as a single player, also exercise makes me feel so great fiscally and emotionally. I consider I have the hobbies that are considered the normal ones such as listening to music, stay at home watching movies with my family, etc.

I'm someone who thinks that technology can help many people, that's the reason I'm studying an engineering that involves everything about technology. During my student life at the university, I've developed many apps that can help some people. For example, during the fourth semester I developed an app that allows people who is starting with a business to administrate they business as well. Also, I created a web page where people who has lake of basic mathematical knowledge can improve their poor knowledge by facing quizzes and some mathematical challenges, of course in the web page you can find information about the most basic complicated mathematics topics. This project is focused on children who are in an elemental level, but everyone can try it if they want so.

I think I'm in a great part of my life with clear mind, very well defined goals, learning a lot and being supported by many people.
